Dr. Stefanie Tompkins
Director
Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency
Department of Defense
675 North Randolph Street
Arlington, VA 22203

Dear Director Tompkins:

Recent reports have raised questions about whether an individual doing research on behalf of the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency (DARPA) investigated the 2016 hack of the Democratic National Committee (DNC).<sup>1</sup>

According to press reports, Dr. Manos Antonakakis, a Georgia Institute of Technology (Georgia Tech) professor who had worked on a DARPA program, was interviewed by Special Counsel John Durham's office. Dr. Antonakakis summarized a portion of that interview in a July 2021 e-mail where he stated that a prosecutor with Durham's office asked him, "Do you believe that DARPA should be instructing you to investigate the origins of a hacker (Guccifer 2.0) that hacked a political entity (DNC)?"<sup>2</sup> In that same e-mail, Dr. Antonakakis wrote that he said to the prosecutor, "this is a question for DARPA's director, and not for me to answer."<sup>3</sup> Since this e-mail became public, a DARPA spokesman told the media, "to the best of our knowledge, no DARPA-funded researchers investigated" the DNC hack.<sup>4</sup>

A recent press report revealed that Georgia Tech researchers drafted "white papers" relating to the DNC hack for DARPA.<sup>5</sup> Documents indicate that these researchers generated at least four documents with two of them "relat[ing] to the DNC hack."<sup>6</sup>

The DNC hack occurred during the lead up to the 2016 presidential election, which was marked by claims of meddling by foreign actors. Some of those claims have since been confirmed to be disinformation efforts by operatives from the Democratic campaign. As details continue to emerge, the public is rightly concerned about the extent to which various federal agencies investigated, validated, dispelled or relied on these claims. Indeed, the credibility of some agencies has been called into question, and the public deserves a full accounting of federal officials' involvement in these activities. Preserving or restoring public trust in these agencies requires transparency, candor and, when appropriate, corrective action.
